November 26, 2012 - New York City

As a landlord or property manager it's an ongoing challenge to run a successful, efficient business in a complex market like New York. Many landlords often say it feels like every day of the year a new law or regulation comes out from the city or state. A problem for many landlords is that short of having a large circle of close friends or family in the real estate business to turn to for guidance, landlords and managers are left trying to process these new laws/regulations on their own. Until now, that meant spending an abundance of time and energy trolling through multiple sources and paying experts for answers to quick, simple questions. Owners must stay on top of every facet of the industry; including laws, insurance, contracts, tenant actions, regulations, court procedures...the list goes on and on. Out of this frustration came the idea that launched what is now LandlordsNY.com – a virtual and free network for New York landlords and property managers that provide a host of resources to help them run a successful business all the while allowing them to connect and learn from each other's experiences and knowledge.

At LandlordsNY.com landlords and property managers now have an exclusive social network for the first time. Need clarification on the newest laws and regulations? Want to bounce a question or idea off other landlords? LandlordsNY is online and available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year to assist its members – and completely free.
