

White joins Deutsche Asset & Wealth Management as a director and head of investment strategy

May 26, 2015 - New York City

According to Deutsche Asset & Wealth Management (Deutsche AWM), Kevin White has joined as a director and head of investment strategy in the Americas for its Alternatives & Real Assets (ARA) business. Based in New York, White reports directly to Mark Roberts, head of research and strategy for the ARA platform.

"We are pleased that Kevin joined our team," said Roberts. "His experience in analyzing economic conditions and determining the implications for real estate markets will enhance our strategic views on the US and support our efforts to deliver on our clients' objectives."

White joins ARA with more than 20 years of experience in macroeconomic and financial analysis. Most recently, he served as a senior vice president in investment strategy & research at American Realty Capital Properties, where he was responsible for developing investment strategies across the firm's owned and managed portfolios. Prior to American Realty Capital Properties, he was a real estate strategist with property & portfolio research, where he worked with large institutional clients to develop investment strategies using the firm's macro and market-level forecasts and research. White was also an economist with International Data Corporation and a tax policy officer with the Department of Finance for the Government of Canada. He earned his BA in Economics from Queen's University and his MA in Economics from the University of British Columbia. White is a CFA charterholder.

With over 40 years of experience, Deutsche AWM's ARA business is one of the world's largest real estate investment managers. The global platform includes the real estate, infrastructure, liquid real assets (listed real estate, listed infrastructure and commodities) and sustainable investments businesses of Deutsche AWM. It delivers a range of investment solutions across the risk/return and geographic spectrums to meet the objectives of governments, corporations, insurance companies, endowments, retirement plans and private clients worldwide.
