Holmdel, NJ Hylan Datacom and Electrical, a telecommunications specialty contracting service provider, has created its nationwide corporate brand, Hylan. Hylan Datacom and Electrical has been serving its customers for more than 57 years. It will continue doing so as Hylan's New York entity, while the organization expands into the Baltimore and Washington, D.C. and Midwest markets by way of the recent strategic acquisitions of Down Under Construction and Arcturus Telecom.

Hylan's corporate branding efforts, including a new logo and website, reflect its new identity as an end-to-end, turnkey service provider for wireline, wireless and smart city infrastructure.

It also demonstrates its commitment to continued business growth, both organically and through future acquisitions as it continues to develop a larger nationwide presence. The Hylan brand will evolve to represent a nationwide trusted partner for communications providers in need of cost-effective, end-to-end infrastructure services, attracting customers in new markets while facilitating enhanced services for existing customers in New York City.

"Our rich history in the New York market spans nearly six decades of successfully providing telecom customers with superior specialty contracting services," said Robert DiLeo, CEO, Hylan. "As our customers expand their operations, we are committed to growing alongside them in order to meet their demands for high-quality data communications services within multiple U.S. markets. We are excited to grow our presence across the nation under the Hylan name, and look forward to ongoing success as we continue to provide customers with the end-to-end solutions and superior service they have come to expect since 1961."

Hylan delivers enhanced engineering capabilities to customers across multiple U.S. cities with a presence in New York, Baltimore, and Washington, D.C. The recent acquisitions of Down Under Construction and Arcturus Telecom provide Hylan with the ability to extend its reach into additional U.S. markets, as well as enhance its ability to deliver engineering and design work for DAS and small cell deployments. Hylan is committed to serving customers with advanced turnkey data communications solutions and will continue to provide a wide range of municipality services, including electrical contracting, maintenance, utility construction and disaster recovery.
