Jaime Schultz, executive managing director, and Jeffrey Lopez, associate director, of Lee NYC have negotiated a ground-floor, 1,300 s/f lease at 15 Ave. A, between East First and East Second Sts., for Roberta’s. Although the brand currently has outposts at two UrbanSpace locations in Manhattan, this will be their first full-service restaurant in the borough.

In addition to their original restaurant in Bushwick, the restauranteurs behind Roberta’s have a location in Los Angeles. Schultz and Lopez also negotiated the lease for a 2,292 s/f full-service Roberta’s restaurant in Williamsburg at 260 Kent Ave., the second building at the Two Trees Domino Sugar Factory development. That location is set to open in early spring of 2020.

The space is split between 5,000 s/f on the ground floor and 3,500 s/f on the lower level. This will be the first retail location for the tattoo lifestyle digital media company.

The new location will serve as a combination tattoo studio, art gallery, photography studio and retail store offering apparel, branded merchandise and art. This location will also serve as the corporate offices of Inked Magazine. The retail store portion will resemble a museum gift shop with Inked souvenir merchandise and art-based items. The tattoo artist pit will be surrounded by a half wall and large pieces of art will be suspended above the walls in order to separate the gallery viewers from the tattoo artists.
