

Manhattan Home Design: Modern furniture at moderate prices

June 27, 2011 - Front Section

Manhattan Home Design, has provided modern, contemporary furniture, based on classic designs, to their clients for the last five years. An online retailer, representing 40 brands, the company strives to provide it's consumers with products at moderate prices. Daniel Levy, owner, originally from Argentina, started Manhattan Home Design with the hopes to supply Americans with high-quality designer furniture at affordable prices. With the help of the Goldman Sachs' 10,000 small business program, Levy's ability to sell and the success of his business, Manhattan Home Design has partnered with N.Y.C. government agencies to supply N.Y.'s outdoor areas with tables, chairs and umbrellas for residents and tourists alike.

These efforts have been extended and Manhattan Home Design is now a furniture dealer for the U.S. Government.

Levy has received recognition from Fortune Magazine and has learned how to run a small business through the likes of men as Warren Buffett and Goldman Sachs CEO Lloyd Blankfein.
