February 12, 2013 - Design / Build

Gamco Corp. has completed a re-design of its corporate website, www.gamcocorp.com. The redesign effort was sparked by Gamco's recent addition of several new product lines and a desire to enhance the user-friendliness of information for design and construction professionals.

The new website sports a contemporary, fresh look complimenting the company's logo design and color scheme as well as its product literature. The website also offers several new features for architects, product specifiers, glass and metal installers, and other construction industry professionals. Gamco's wide array of capabilities, customization and quality craftsmanship is described, along with the latest news. Expanded information now on the Gamco website includes downloadable brochures, product information details and architectural drawings, all useful in the creation of bid packages, project plans and construction documents.

"Gamco offers many types of products, including standard and custom designs, and with the website redesign effort, we were able to reorganize product information to facilitate finding the right product for the project," said Howard Nguyen, marketing manager and leader of the redesign effort.

Gamco manufactures building fenestration products including storefront glazing systems, commercial entranceways, skylights, solariums and curtain wall, as well as architectural elements such as canopies, sunshades, railings, claddings, column covers and other special metal items.

The Gamco website also includes an extensive Project Gallery, illustrating the broad scope of fenestration and architectural metal products which the company crafts. Project designers, property owners and contractors can view myriad styles, finishes and actual installations in this section.

"Gamco regularly works with architects, construction professionals and building owners to create the exact design they seek. Our Project Gallery offers a wealth of ideas," noted Mr. Nguyen.
