

Empire Commercial Construction welcomes Buisch

September 10, 2012 - Upstate New York

According to Empire Commercial Construction, a retail-specific division of Taylor-The Builders, Mark Buisch has been added to their project management team. Buisch has been hired as a new project manager to help expand the company's retail-specific growth in the Upstate New York region.

"Mark brings Empire a terrific combination of energy and experience that's imperative as we expand our market reach in the retail-specific industry," says Taylor CEO, Jim Taylor. "Mark understands our mission and will enable Empire to broaden its scope of work and expand our client base. He will strive to maintain our established levels of quality and service, while hitting a competitive price point that the market demands."

Buisch spent the last 18 years operating Mark Buisch Construction, performing numerous commercial and high-end residential projects in the Hornell area. Buisch is known for his ability to deliver fine finish work, on a tight schedule, which translates well to Empire's "Retail, Built Right" philosophy.

On the weekends, Buisch can be found spending his free time on the gridiron, having been an Assistant Varsity Football Coach for Hornell High School the past twenty-four years.

Empire Commercial Construction, a division of Taylor - The Builders, specializes in quick turn-around commercial and retail space across New York State. Their project professionals have successfully completed scores of renovations, build-outs and pad locations for premier national restaurant and retailers. They will make sure it's built right, on time, the first time. Simply put...Retail Built Right.
