

All Green Recycling (AGR) forms new company: All Green Global (AGG)

October 29, 2012 - Green Buildings

All Green Recycling, LLC (AGR), a growing provider of sustainable solutions and disposition for electronics (commonly known as "e-waste"), has formed All Green Global, LLC (AGG).

The new company, AGG, will focus on new and existing opportunities with global clients including U.S. Government & Military agencies, Fortune 500 companies, the Aviation and Construction sectors, and developing countries who are facing a wide range of environmental challenges without a well-defined e-waste management program.

RedOrange, LLC is a privately owned supply chain management, logistics, and global procurement company. It is registered as a Service Disabled Veteran Company (SDVC) with the U.S. Government & Military Agencies with associated Cage Code, DUNS and NAICS codes.

Peter Jegou, All Green Recycling CEO said, "This partnership expands our core competency. The formation of AGG is an important step in All Green's mission to better serve its clients and become the industry leader in electronic waste management and other types of recoverable assets. Partnering with RedOrange enables us both to expand into new markets and broaden our services to our clients quickly and efficiently."

"This is a very unique and exciting opportunity for us to leverage our global sourcing and logistics network along with our end-to-end supply chain management experience in bringing innovative and earth-conscious solutions for e-waste management," says Sam Philip, President of RedOrange.

"All Green Global brings proven optimal solutions and capabilities to immediately expand the types of electronic and waste management programs we currently offer our clients,"

"We look forward to having Sam and Mark bringing their green vision to our efforts and be part of our growing management team" added Peter Jegou.
