

Ruskin Moscou Faltischek forms International Practice Group

May 28, 2013 - Front Section

Ruskin Moscou Faltischek, P.C. arranged the formation of the RMF International Practice Group, to be co-chaired by Douglas Cooper, senior partner and member of the firm's litigation department and construction law practice group and Vivian Breier, partner and member of the firm's Corporate and Securities Group.

The RMF International Practice Group is a multi-disciplinary group, consisting of attorneys who specialize in assisting foreign entities or individuals with U.S. matters.

Also US entities or individuals that require international assistance. The diverse group of attorneys has worked on matters here in the U.S, EU, Israel, China, Korea, Canada and Latin America. The group is comprised of a highly skilled legal team, with a diverse skill set ranging from corporate transactional work, intellectual property, employment, real estate, litigation, trusts and estates, to highly specialized privacy, internet and healthcare related legal services. The group can successfully direct US and foreign individuals and entities through the myriad and unique nuances of operating within a global framework. Additionally, we are uniquely situated to assist start-ups in connection with their financial and legal needs. As an international legal resource, the practice group provides comprehensive multinational support to clients. The group guides clients through the maze of laws, languages and cultures to successfully represent and complete their corporate business transactions here in the US and abroad. Ruskin Moscou Faltischek's International Practice Group is prepared to represent businesses on strategic, tactical and legal matters for U.S. clients in international business activities and foreign entities here in the US.

"The accelerated pace of change spurred by the Internet and commercial globalization was quickly seen by Ruskin Moscou Faltischek as an area requiring our involvement to properly serve our clients' needs. The changing national and international business/legal landscape provides an exciting challenge to a firm as diverse and vibrant as ours. Quality legal work at a lower cost than is generally found at the larger city firms combined with close personal attention enables us to provide value and superior strategic global services," said managing partner Mark Mulholland.
