What was your greatest professional accomplishment in 2013?

In light of Hurricane Sandy's devastation, hundreds of buildings were put out of commission due to flooding. It took the better part of 2013 to recover and restore these buildings back to an operational mode. As the security consultant and systems' designer to a number of these buildings, I worked tirelessly with maximum effort to assure that the essential security infrastructure to protect the people, property and assets was swiftly and efficiently put back in place.

What was your most notable project, deal or transaction in 2013?

As the security consultant to Silverstein Properties, I was asked to design a dedicated, private turnstile entry control system for a major tenant in a Silverstein building. What was notable was the short time frame allowable for completion in light of the major construction required and high-tech security measures needed.
