

04-25-2014 – Center for Real Estate Studies at New York Law School to hold Rooftops Conference

April 23, 2014 - Front Section

The Center for Real Estate Studies at New York Law School will present “Rooftops Conference NYC 2014 - Exploring How Real Estate Impacts Not-for-Profit Organizations” on Friday, April 25 from 8:30 a.m. – 3 p.m.

Experts in real estate, not-for profits and legal, financial and regulatory affairs explore how real estate impacts the operations and mission of not-for-profit organizations, looking at challenges and opportunities and the links between markets, mission, and property strategies at the fourth annual Rooftops Conference NYC. Panels include:

- Harvesting Assets or Eating the Seed Corn? Assessing and Addressing Core and Non-Core Properties
- While You Were Resting: Property Regulation and Property Strategy
- Risk Management for Not-for-Profit Properties
- Trends and Tides: Updates in the Built Environment
- Luncheon Program: What Is Your Building Saying to Your Audience?

The event will be held at New York Law School, 185 West Broadway (at Leonard St.)

Admission is free for not-for-profit executives, staff and board members, government officials and employees

$95 - General Registration (all other professionals)
