

McGuire Development launches new website

July 14, 2014 - Upstate New York

McGuire Development Company, a local commercial development, real estate consulting and property management firm, has launched its new website at www.mcguiredevelopment.com.

With a new streamlined interface, users can easily find information about McGuire Development's comprehensive real estate and development services, portfolio and listing information, as well as project and client experiences and information about the company's expansion into other areas of the U.S.

"We are thrilled to have our new website launch as it attractively showcases how our company has grown over the last eight and a half years. The time and dedication our skilled team puts into every facet of McGuire Development is now showcased visually for each of our current and prospective clients to see," says Jim Dentinger, president of McGuire Development Company.
