July 28, 2014 - New York City

Wolf Haldenstein Adler Freeman & Herz LLP recently welcomed Jeremy Cohen Esq. as a partner to the firm. Cohen will be working on real estate and commercial disputes.

Prior to joining Wolf Haldenstein, Cohen was as a senior associate with Kramer Levin Naftalis & Frankel LLP.

Among his noteworthy accomplishments in the real estate arena were: winning dismissal of a $20 million fraud claim against a condominium developer in the N.Y. County Commercial Division; helping a client secure ownership of a marina in the Caribbean; obtaining dismissal of breach of contract claims against the owner of a professional sports team in connection with its development of a new arena; and securing dismissal of derivative claims against a hotel developer.

"We are delighted to welcome Jeremy to the fold," said Steven Sladkus, Esq. who leads the firm's real estate litigation practice. "His background and extensive experience in litigating major real estate disputes complement the talents and skill sets of our existing transactional group. Moreover, Jeremy is no stranger to the New York real estate community, and has represented some of Manhattan's leading property owners and developers in state and federal litigation involving condominiums, mixed-use residential/commercial developments, hotels, marinas, and real estate investment funds. He is a phenomenal addition to our team."

Jeffrey Schwartz, co-chair of the real estate department, said, "Jeremy fits in with everything we do here at Wolf Haldenstein. He has had an impressive track record in representing and attracting high-profile sophisticated clients. We are very excited to be working with such a talented, results-oriented achiever."

In 2014, Cohen was recognized by the New York Law Journal as one of 42 statewide 40-and-Under Rising Stars of the New York Bar. He also has been recognized as a Rising Star by Super Lawyers, New York City Metro Edition in each of the past two years.
