

Mancini Duffy expands designs presence in New Jersey by joining forces with Jenkins & Grey

June 20, 2017 - Design / Build

New York, NY Taking another step in its bold program of reinvention, New York-based architecture and design firm Mancini Duffy has associated itself with design studio Jenkins & Grey, effective June 1st.

“Jenkins & Grey is one of the most well-respected design studios in New Jersey,” said Christian Giordano, president of Mancini Duffy. “Combined with our architecture and planning capabilities, joining forces with them allows Mancini Duffy to offer our clients comprehensive and cutting-edge design services. It also expands our footprint into new territory. Dana Jenkins, founder of Jenkins & Grey, has been named principal at Mancini Duffy, and will lead its New Jersey operations from its office in Millburn—convenient to NYC via quick, direct train service.

She said, “Partnering with Mancini Duffy is a natural evolution: We share a common approach to design. And we want to shake things up.”

The expansion gives the firm a deeper reach into the key market of New Jersey, where throughout the state developers are revitalizing corporate office parks, modernizing their workspaces to attract tech, media, and creative tenants. Mancini Duffy’s increased capabilities will allow the firm to continue deliver top-quality, innovative design to these sectors, as well as financial and professional services. The firm’s clients include Somerset Development, Normandy Real Estate Partners, Vision Real Estate Partners, Guardian Life Insurance, Jersey Central Power & Light, Energy Capital Partners, Commvault, Pinnacle Foods Inc., New Jersey Transportation Authority, and Sills Cummis & Gross.
