August 04, 2008 - New York City

North Bergen, NJ-based general contractor and construction manager Mc Gowan Builders, Inc. (MGB) recently completed an interior fit-out for law firm Binder & Binder.

MGB president and CEO, Patrick Mc Gowan, said, "We are proud to have served the prominent law firm as general contractor. Corporate interior construction continues to remain our main market, in addition to Mc Gowan Builders' ground-up construction portfolio. The volume of MGB's work nationwide is poised to exceed $100 million in 2008."

MGB served Binder & Binder, a social security disability law firm, as general contractor for a structural redevelopment, expansion, and a complete interior fit-out of the firm's 22,000 s/f, two-story office building at 34 Industrial St. The $3.3 million project encompassed the addition of a floor, including a floor slab, steel columns, and beams; construction of column foundations; exterior renovation; demolition of the pre-existing space; construction of new office interiors; and new mechanical, electrical, plumbing, and sprinkler systems. The MGB team installed a new sewer ejector system that incorporates a pump and a ¼-mile pipe connection to the city sewer line.

Binder & Binder administrative offices, designed by UAI Urban Architectural Initiatives, encompass an open plan area, private offices, and a large employee cafeteria. The building features a new elevator and a staircase.
