What does it mean to you to be a team player?

Being part of an integrated project team has been a key component in my success as a Project Manager. No one person is responsible for the completion of a project, it takes a group of people collaboratively working together to be successful—whether it's fitting out an existing space or erecting an out-of-the-ground building. We maximize results, budget, schedule, and client satisfaction when everyone comes together—and recognize that each person is just as critical as the next.
