

Eschete of H2M certified as a PCS

August 18, 2008 - Long Island

According to H2M, a multi-disciplined engineering, architectural and environmental laboratory service firm, Arthur Eschete became certified as a Protective Coatings Specialist (PCS). Eschete is one of the only 500 professional who have obtained this certification nationwide.

The Society of Protective Coatings (SSPC) is an international association focusing on the protection and preservation of steel, concrete, and other industrial and marine structures through the use of protective coatings.

Eschete has been in the protective coatings industry for over 16 years. This experience has given him the knowledge and responsibilities that include supervising paint crews, paint and surface preparation, and inspections and coatings failure analysis. Eschete currently is the department head of H2M Coating Inspection Division which specializes in the inspection of over 100 water storage tanks across Long Island.
