New York, NY According to Robinson+Cole, Virginia Trunkes as counsel in the firm's construction practice.

As the former chair of the NYC Bar Association's Construction Law Committee, Trunkes has a broad overview of all issues implicating construction projects including insurance and regulatory issues, which inform her practical approach in negotiating parties' respective obligations. Coupled with her demonstrated collaborative and project-oriented spirit, she is skilled at bringing parties together to arrive at practical solutions to effectuate their deal while still protecting their interests.

She advocates on behalf of developers; apartment building, brownstone and condominium unit owners; cooperative boards of directors; construction managers, contractors and subcontractors; and design services professionals in negotiating their business contracts and adjacent-owner license access agreements.

When complex disputes do arise, and when alternative dispute resolution cannot be achieved, Trunkes litigates in state and federal courts, where she advocates fiercely on her clients' behalf. Common litigation issues include any and all construction disputes, including construction and design defects, bond claims, mechanic's liens, delay and lost productivity claims, and claims arising from force majeure events.

In addition to her construction specific litigation experience, Trunkes has handled civil matters ranging from contractual breaches, fiduciary obligations, licenses, the right to access, boundaries (trespass and encroachment), Zoning Lot Development Agreements, and interpretation of and compliance with administrative regulations. Trunkes's several years as a court attorney at the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, First Department, enhance her ability to navigate and sift through granular details while communicating to judges the core factual issues and persuasive legal arguments.

Trunkes is admitted to practice law in New Jersey and New York.
