

ULI NY names 5th Annual Awards for Excellence in Development finalists

January 07, 2020 - Owners Developers & Managers

New York, NY The Urban Land Institute New York (ULI NY) revealed the 2020 nominees for its 5th Annual Awards for Excellence in Development. This competition recognizes development projects across all industry sectors that demonstrate a commitment to excellence in development, design, sustainability and resilience, and community impact. These projects best exemplify ULI's ongoing commitment to responsible land use and the creation of sustainable, thriving communities.

This year's finalists encompass a variety of prominent projects that showcase the city's growth in diverse sectors, including the Statue of Liberty Museum, the New Lab at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and Hunter's Point South Waterfront Park. ULI NY invited the real estate community throughout the state to submit projects for consideration in diverse categories that span civic, office, hotel, affordable housing, market-rate housing, mixed-use, institutional, and repositioning or redevelopment. The awards are open to ULI NY members and non-members who have completed private, public, and non-profit projects.

"The Awards for Excellence are an opportunity for ULI New York to shine a light on the developments that are transforming and revitalizing New York," said Steven Kohn, chairman of ULI New York. "These projects are contributing to New York's growth in responsible and sustainable ways, the results of which we will see for generations to come."

The 20 finalists were chosen from over 60 submissions and the winners will be revealed April 21st at the Awards for Excellence Gala at Cipriani Wall St.
