The transaction was brokered by Michael Tuccillo and Willie Jalboux of the firm's Manhattan office.

Regarding the transaction, Jalboux said, "We were able provide the owner with the necessary market information to help guide them through the transaction process."

The duo represented the seller, who occupied two spaces in the center, and the buyer, a seasoned real estate operator.

The shopping center consists of seven storefronts at 9,500 s/f, and a mezzanine. The asset was fully renovated in 2010. Five storefronts are currently occupied.

"Two vacancies in the center offer the buyer a future upside," said Tuccillo.
