

L+M names Shoab to head structural engineering division

April 21, 2020 - Design / Build

New York, NY Lawless + Mangione Architects and Engineers is enhancing L+M Structural with the hiring of Syed Shoab, PE as the head of the firm's structural engineering division.

With a career spanning over 20 years, his range of experience encompasses a broad array of services. Shoab plans to strengthen the firm's structural engineering capabilities, build on the group's professionalism, and introduce a variety of new services.

His addition will enable L+M to help building owners and managers respond to recent OSHA requirements. The services will include the testing and certification of roof anchors, the safety evaluation of fire escapes, mandatory parking structure evaluations, and retaining wall evaluations. Shoab will be supported by an expanded team of new and current professionals.

"We are delighted that Syed Shoab has joined L+M," said Robert Lawless AIA, L+M's founding partner. "As a senior associate, he brings a breadth of experience and innovation which is well suited to the broad range of work we continually have underway."

Shoab's experience in the design and construction industries include structure analysis and design, project management, quality assurance, project estimation and planning, condition assessment, forensic evaluation, pre and post occupancy inspections and pre and post failure analysis etc.
