

American Investment Properties names Martorana new investment sales manager

November 23, 2021 - Long Island

Garden City, NY According to American Investment Properties (AIP), Will Martorana has been named investment sales manager.

In this role, Martorana is responsible for managing an efficient and structured team operation. This includes creating an innovative, challenging, and collaborative work environment that cultivates commercial real estate specialists.

Martorana's passion for commercial real estate started before his time at AIP. His experience with CRE, market analysis, and financial analytics all began in his time at the University of Massachusetts (Amherst), where he graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Managerial Economics.

Currently, Martorana leverages his knowledge and applies it to the firm's brokerage practices, helping team members optimize brokerage services for our clients.

Martorana was raised in Long Island, New York on the North Shore. In his free time, Martorana loves to continue professional development through attending CRE seminars, studying local market trends and learning managerial theory.
