

Wright joins Avison Young as principal and director of land development services

September 27, 2022 - National News

Morristown, NJ Avison Young appointed Adam Wright as principal and director, land development services to provide clients with end-to-end development solutions across the northeast region and nationally. His diversified background includes more than 20 years of experience in architecture, entitlements, ground-up development and construction management. The land development services team also includes Brian Veneri, senior lead and Chris Megnin, senior project manager.

“We are honored to welcome Adam Wright, Brian Veneri and Chris Megnin as experts in delivering turn-key, land development solutions,” said Stephen Silverstein, principal & managing director of U.S. studio, project and construction management at Avison Young. “Through expanding our land development capabilities, we can deliver on increasingly complex business imperatives that our occupier, owner, and investor clients have as they evaluate real estate for their service needs and identify their capital investment requirements,” said Jeff Heller, principal and managing director, New Jersey.

Wright, Veneri and Megnin join Avison Young from Wonder, a food technology start-up. At Wonder they led real estate expansion strategy and managed construction for last mile vehicle hubs, cold storage distribution warehouses and food production facilities. The team’s diverse experience includes delivering land development projects in the Northeast and managing national, turn-key, portfolio solutions. Some of their notable ground-up construction projects include a 150,000s/f office campus in El Paso, TX for the global human resources management company, ADP; a 470,000 s/f manufacturing facility in Piscataway, NJ and a 100,000 s/f self-storage facility in Yaphank, NY.

“Brian, Chris and I are excited to join Avison Young’s innovative team and collaborative culture,” said Wright. “We are ready to jump in and drive opportunities for land development services, coupled with project and construction management across the U.S.”

The addition of the Land Development Services team is part of Avison Young’s vigorous approach to grow its consultative real estate solution offerings and part of the firm’s ongoing expansion across North America.
