Manhattan, NYPacific Program Management (PPM) has promoted Sandra Yenko to vice president, East Region, leading the company's business strategy and client relationships for the region. She will work closely with Mark Wanic, PPM's chief officer of client solutions, to bring focus and vision to the opportunities and client relationships in cities across the Northeast, Mid-Atlantic, and Midwest in alignment with PPM's expansion strategy across the U.S. and Canada.

Since joining PPM in 2018, Yenko has led growth in the Eastern U.S. for one of the firm's prominent technology clients, seeding 15 new cities across the U.S. for PPM. She also established the New York Office in 2020, with additional satellites in Washington, D.C. and Boston, and helped facilitate a cross-organizational approach to integrated service lines.

"Sandra's proven ability to understand client needs has helped deepen our relationships in a competitive and dynamic commercial real estate market," said Wanic. "In this new role, she will further drive successful business development strategy across the region, building upon a proven approach that helps companies maximize the use of their real estate portfolio to enhance productivity, improve employee retention, and reduce unnecessary overhead costs."

With 20 years of architecture, real estate strategy, and commercial interior project management experience, Yenko's background enables her to lead teams that deliver intelligent, value-driven solutions to clients' specific real estate and facility operation objectives.

"I welcome the opportunity to provide leadership for a firm that continues to pioneer new thinking in workplace consulting, capital project management, and transition and relocation services," Yenko said. "I am ready to deepen our roots on the east coast and expand our reach and relationships."

Prior to joining PPM, Yenko was with Mace North America, where she led project management teams and workplace effectiveness consulting. She also worked as an architect in building experiential spaces for firms like Gensler, Perkins+Will, and Ayers Saint Gross. With more than 20 years of design and construction industry leadership experience, Yenko has completed projects across the U.S., Canada, and internationally for global industry leaders in technology, media, finance, and professional services companies.
