Farmingdale, NY The Real Estate Institute (REI) at Stony Brook University (SBU) College of

Business will hold a joint panel event on March 8th at Heritage Club at Bethpage. The spring luncheon, titled “Challenges in a Changing Construction Environment,” promises an exploration of the landscape of work environments and a discussion on defining challenges in a changing construction environment. This event will bring together industry experts and leaders to share their perspectives on the future of construction in today’s business environment.

Join REI at SBU for a discussion that will bring insight into the evolving landscape of construction and the challenges faced in adapting to the construction environment. As paradigms shift, this event will dissect the emerging trends, technological innovations, and design principles that are shaping the trends of construction. The panelists will offer insights into the challenges and opportunities in adapting to meet the needs of businesses and employees.
