TPG Architecture celebrates 45 years

June 25, 2024 - Design / Build

Manhattan, NY TPG Architecture marked its 45th anniversary – an occasion that recognizes the importance of the client trust and partnership that has been integral to its success since 1979. As TPG Architecture looks to its future, the firm is excited to strengthen its design legacy through collaboration.

"This milestone is a humble reminder of where we began, our talented team and the amazing clients we have partnered with throughout the years," said James Phillips, AIA, founder and managing executive at TPG Architecture. "Our firm's collaborative mindset has created a rich mosaic, a village united by a common vision. This foundation enables us to deliver timeless design solutions and create lasting relationships with our clients."

Since its inception, TPG has embraced the various perspectives, skill sets and passions of its team. The firm's work reflects its ability to listen and learn – translating each client's objectives into spaces that truly reflect their identities. This commitment has earned TPG its reputation as one of the top interior design firms in New York City.

TPG also expresses its gratitude to its staff, clients, partners and consultants. "Each member of our team brings something unique, and that's what makes us who we are," said Phillips. "Thank you to everyone who's been part of our journey — we look forward to many more years of success together."

TPG's portfolio includes award-winning projects in workplace design, retail banking, healthcare, hospitality and architecture. They also work with commercial building owners to increase the value and leaseability of their properties. Some of their longstanding clients include Madison Square Garden and the NHL as well as Chase, Interpublic Group, BXP, The Durst Organization, NYU Langone Health, Hospital for Special Surgery, Amazon, Adidas, Richard Mille and El Palacio de Hierro.
