Uniondale, NY Forchelli Deegan Terrana LLP (FDT), one of Long Island's premier law firms, has created a tax practice group.

Rachel Partain and Robert Groman will co-chair the practice group. They will be working with Alexander Kerzhner and Lorraine Boss to deliver tax advisory and tax controversy services.

Both Groman and Partain possess extensive knowledge of federal and state income tax, along with decades of experience assisting business owners at every critical stage of their companies. They are seasoned tax advisors dedicated to helping clients manage tax risks while implementing practical solutions.

"We are excited to establish a tax practice group at Forchelli Deegan Terrana LLP as part of our ongoing commitment of providing our clients with a comprehensive range of legal services," said Jeffrey Forchelli, chairman of the firm and co-managing partner. "With this launch, we are bringing together a team of highly skilled professionals who are passionate about delivering results and helping our clients navigate the complexities of tax law."

"I am eager to collaborate with our colleagues across the firm to offer value-added legal services to our clients," said Partain.

“I look forward to continuing to serve our clients with the excellence and dedication that define Forchelli Deegan Terrana LLP,” said Groman.

Partain, Groman, and Boss earned their LL.M.s in Taxation from the New York University School of Law. Groman and Boss both earned their law degrees from St. John’s University School of Law. Partain earned her law degree from the University of Chicago School of Law. Kerzhner earned his law degree from Brooklyn Law School and is a Certified Public Accountant.
