

WEDLI hosts agriculture and aquaculture panel at meeting

December 15, 2008 - Long Island

Three vital players in the industries of agriculture and aquaculture on Long Island were panelists at the third in a series of recent meetings of the the Women Economic Developers of Long Island. Under the series rubric, "That Was Then - This Is Now" the organization played host most recently to Joseph Gergela, III, executive director, Long Island Farm Bureau; Karen Rivera, owner, Aeros Cultured Oyster Co.; and Eve Kaplan-Walbrecht, owner, Garden of Eve Organic Farm. The discussion centered on the retooling of Long Island's age-old, first industries to meet the demands and constraints of the 21st century and the ongoing efforts to restructure and revive those industries.

WEDLI meets every second Thursday at The Woodlands, 1 South Woods Rd.
