

Rosewood hires new associate broker Steinmetz

April 14, 2009 - Front Section

According to Rosewood Realty Group, Mark Steinmetz has joined the firm's commercial investment sales team as an associate broker. Steinmetz brings with him years of related industry experience as a successful high producing broker.

Prior to joining the firm, Steinmetz was the president and CEO of Lemarc Energy, Inc., a firm he founded in 2007 that identified and completed oil and gas projects in the U.S. He raised start-up capital for the company along with extensive income and expense forecasting. He also researched and developed business prospectus for company projects, along with managing a staff of employees.

Before that he worked as a senior investment sales associate at a top commercial real estate firm where he transacted over $250 million in commercial real estate sales, created and implemented team sales techniques and generated leads.

"Mark is a seasoned broker with an intuitive knowledge of the market," said Aaron Jungreis, founder of Rosewood, whose company now has 10 brokers on staff. "He is a keen analyst and understands how to get a deal done. "We are very pleased to welcome yet another deal junkie to Rosewood Realty."

"I am very proud to be a new member of the Rosewood Realty Group team," said Steinmetz. "The team that Aaron and David Berger have put together is a solid one, that is unparalleled in the industry."

Rosewood Realty, a commercial brokerage firm, founded in 2007 by Jungreis, specializes in multi-family and office buildings, with activity focused in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Florida.
