November 20, 2009 - Long Island

With winter fast approaching, tough times in the construction industry may have many experiencing a sense of gloom. BidForMaterials.com is shedding some light! Only 32 days after launch, there has been an overwhelming response to its new concept in material costing. The BidForMaterials.com website seeks to connect contractors in search of better material pricing with suppliers searching for unlimited leads. With over 300 suppliers signed up in 20 days, BidForMaterials.com has now partnered with real estate mogul, John O'Hara, managing partner of Corporate Realty Services LLC, a commercial real estate broker and construction consultant.

With over 25 years experience in real estate and the construction industry, O'Hara has extensive ties to the market that BidForMaterials.com is trying to capture. O'Hara's unique type of brokering will enable BidForMaterials.com to connect with the commercial industry.

O'Hara sees a bright future for the company. He said, "We are expanding into new areas all the time. We are making the connection between contractors and suppliers on a regional level and a national level. The foundation of this concept has been overwhelmingly accepted throughout the nation. Suppliers are signing up FREE and contractors are feeding our material lists. We know that this will change the way competitive pricing for materials is conducted."
