

Bonora and Drallios promoted at Costas Kondylis

December 07, 2007 - New York City

According to Costas Kondylis & Partners, LLP, Steven Bonora and George Drallios, members of the firm since 1994 and 1995 respectively, have been promoted to partner.

Bonora is responsible for developing and maintaining client relations as well as managing the design and construction phases of his team's projects from concept to completion. He possesses over 16 years of experience in the construction industry including more than 13 years of professional experience in the design and construction of numerous rental, condominium, dormitory, and mixed-use projects. In his previous capacity as project architect, Bonora had been responsible for a wide variety of prestigious projects.

Drallios manages the ongoing development of the firm's expanding international practice in addition to several of the firm's local projects in the tri-state area. As a partner, he is responsible for the development, coordination and oversight of the design team and technical disciplines associated with a project from its schematic design phase through construction administration.
